THE BEAVER ARGUS.

Vol. 52---No. 44. Beaver, Pa., Wednesday, November 2, 1870. Established 1818.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Advertisements are inserted at the rate of $1,00 per square for first insertion, and for each subsequent insertion 50 cents. A liberal discount made on yearly advertisements.

A space equal to ten lines of this type measures a square.

Business Notices set under a head by themselves immediately after the local news, will be charged ten cents a line for each insertion.

Advertisements should be handed in before Monday noon to insure insertion in that week's paper.

THE BEAVER ARGUS

Is published every Wednesday in the old Argus building on Third Street, Beaver, Pa., at $2 per year in advance.

Communications on subjects of local or general interest are respectfully solicited. To insure attention favors of this kind must invariably be accompanied by the name of the author.

Letters and communications should be addressed to ARTIFICIAL TEETH PERFECTED!—T. & H. J. CHANDLER have purchased the exclusive right of Beaver county to use Dr. Stuck's Patent by which they can put up Vulcanite as thin as Gold Plate, with a beautiful enameled polish; and so light and elastic as to perfectly adapt itself to the mouth; obviating all that clumsy and bulky condition, so much complained of heretofore; and lessening their liability to break 100 per cent. Indeed, on seeing, it could be willing to wear the old style plate any longer than they could conveniently get them exchanged. All branches of Dentistry performed in the best and most substantial manner. In filling teeth with gold, etc., we challenge competition from any quarter, and can refer to living subjects whose fillings have stood between thirty and forty years. Among the number Hon. John Allison will exhibit fillings we inserted some 35 years ago; the teeth as perfect as the day they were filled. Laughing Gas prepared on a new plan, freeing it from all unpleasant and dangerous effects, making the extraction of teeth a source of pleasure rather than of horror and pain. Prices as low as any good dentist in the State. Office at Beaver Station, Rochester Pa.

Also, agent for the "Anchor Line" of first class Ocean Steamers. Tickets sold to all ports in England, Ireland, Scotland, Germany and France. Office in Leaf's brick row, Diamond, Rochester. apr29'68

ORIGINAL.

A TRIP ON THE HUDSON RIVER.

[A young lady—an acquaintance of ours—received the following letter, a few days ago, which we take pleasure in laying before the readers of the ARGUS.]:

"If our memory serves us rightly, we promised a certain fair cousin a hasty, and perchance rude, sketch of

Our Sail Up the River.

The ebb-tide of humanity setting oceanward, on a beautiful afternoon in June, drifted me in common with many other rural "carpet-baggers" on board the magnificent North River steamer, "James W. Baldwin," destined for Rondout, on the Hudson.

"All aboard!" rang out from the capacious lungs of the proper functionary; and, in another moment, we swung out into the river, when, from an advantageous position on the promenade deck, we were in time to see a charming bit of scenery. Below us, the Upper Bay, stretching away to the dim and hazy shores of Staten and Long Islands, which are separated by the fort-guarded "Narrows." Scores of those "ships in which men go down to the sea," were riding lazily at anchor. The drifting river craft, with graceful sails bent to the breeze, and "ferry-boats," alive with human freight, rushing with lightning speed across the river. The green and shady "Elysian Fields" of Hoboken invitingly near; and, on either side, "Tall spire, and glittering roof, and battlement, and banners waving in the sunny air," is too bewildering to see at one time—leaving out of the question every attempt at description. But the great city, with all its attractions, is fast fading out, and we are approaching rural scenery which testifies to the fact that "God made the country, and man made the town."

Nestling yonder, at the southern terminus of the Palisades, is the site of old "Fort Lee," and opposite, on the bluff, are also the remains of "Fort Washington." These points, aside from the beauty of their surroundings, have quite a historic interest; for, after the battle of Long Island—fought near the site of Greenwood Cemetery, Aug. 27th, 1776—and the subsequent conflicts of Harlem Plains and White Plains, Ft. Washington, after a desperate resistance, surrendered to the foe.... Washington—crossing the river—joined General Greene at Fort Lee, and immediately commenced his retreat across New Jersey. The "Red Coats" also crossed over and occupied Fort Lee, and the hopes of the colonists were, for a time, shrouded in gloom. Small they might be. Near Washington, on the opposite bank, was a beautiful surrounding a fine [illegible] situated the "[illegible]um," (or rather [illegible] is one of the [illegible] ed schools, of the kind, in the country. And now, for twenty miles or more, the west side of the river is walled and guarded by the stately "Palisades," but the eastern shore, as if to compensate for the abruptness of the view across the way, is delightfully undulating; and, at this season of the year, perfectly resplendent in its garb of green and gold, while now and again one catches a glimpse of those world-renowned suburban palaces of New York's most wealthy and favored sons. But, rushing on and on, the line of the Harlem river is passed, and New York city and county left behind us.

The next point of interest is "Forest's Castle," an old, gray, stone pile, built twenty odd years ago, in imitation of the old European castles, at an expense of nearly a quarter of a million dollars, by the great tragedian whose name it bears. It was sold, however, sometime since, to the Catholics who occupy it as a "nunnery," and have added to it—as an institution of learning—one of the most imposing edifices in the State.

But, here we are at "Yonkers," a young and thriving village of eight to ten thousand inhabitants, very romantic in site and architecture, and is one of New York's most prized and petted retreats—distant seventeen miles from the "City Hall." "Many and many a year ago"—when the place and I were young together—I spent about one year in Yonkers very pleasantly, if not very profitably.

We will pass "Hastings" and "Dobb's Ferry" and bestow our admiration upon "Irvington," the home of the late Washington Irving, too well known as a man of letters and most genial writer to need any praise from me.

"None knew him but to love him;
None named him but to praise."

His quaint old residence we catch a glimpse of amid the drooping willows, and very near the murmuring waters—a very gem of loveliness.—Two miles above is "Tarrytown," whose half hidden villas and graceful church spires pointing heavenward, look inviting enough to suggest a few days tarry to any way-worn traveler. Here, also, is the spot, memorable in history, where Major Andre was captured in Revolutionary days. With his sad history you are of course acquainted. A few years since, the people of that locality erected, with appropriate ceremony, a neat monument to mark the spot where the arrest took place, as also to commemorate the event. You remember the "Major" was betrothed to a beautiful and accomplished young lady (at "Ome,"—England) who, after the signing of the death-warrant by Washington, and the subsequent execution, made some rather severe poetical remarks about the "Father of his Country," commencing—as nearly as I can remember them,—

"Oh, Washington! We thought thee just and good;
Nor knew 'by Nero thirst for guiltless blood!
Cruel, to use the power which fortune gave,
Thou cool, determined murderer of the brave."

But, while we've been digressing, we have arrived at "Piermont."—Here the old track of the Erie Railway—ere the Jersey compromise—landed passengers and freight at the end of the long pier which extended nearly half way across the river, and the old steamboat 'Erie' was brought into play to finish up the trip. The long sweep of the Palisades here terminate, and are in full view for miles below us, and "Nyack"—king in a green, sunny cove, just in advance—presents a fine view to those who have the eye to see it.

On the east side of the river, and in full view as we advance, the gray walls of the "Sing Sing State Prison" loom up before us and bring to our memory the fact that, on a particular morning five or six years ago, we visited this institution early, and saw the thousand cells, with their stone walls, and massive iron doors thrown open, and the thousand convicts in their striped uniforms march out, fall into line in the long galleries, and march out with all the military precision of West Point cadets. Sing Sing village, a half mile above, is irregularly built up along the steep bank of a small stream that comes rushing down into the river at that point and at once loses its identity forever. I saw nothing of interest there at the time of my visit, save [illegible] fine iron bridge thrown across the ravine at a height of nearly one hundred feet, and the stepped-down stone aquaduct of the Croton Water-works, a short distance above it. Steadily advancing up the river, which is here broad and beautiful, "Peekskill," an old manufacturing town of some note, is soon passed and we are off "Haverstraw," noted only as being the locality of the conference of treason held between Arnold and Andre, consummating the surrender of West Point—which transfer did not take place according to programme—and for the manufacture of brick which are here made in amazing quantities, for the New York market mostly.

And now, as the sun is getting low in the west, we are nearing the grand old "Highlands," which seem to crowd together and abruptly end the river; but, as we advance, the hills modestly retire, and we speed on amid scenery celebrated for its imposing beauty, as well in Europe as in America. "Iona Island," a green gem in an aqeous setting, on our left, and the village of "Coldspring" cozily nestling in amongst the hills on our right, are points of note; but, the "Baldwin" is now cutting the long shadows of the hills, which extend far out on the water, and ringing an alarm in advance; we run in, and make our first landing, at "Cozen's Dock," where the cabs come running down the steep and rock-cut carriage way from the fine hotel, far above us on a commanding bluff—fitted up as a summer resort—but, as they return, as they came down, (without passengers), I concluded that the guests were, doubtless, coming up on the next boat. I took note of a little water-fall, mentioned in a former letter of yours, also, an old water-wheel in ruin; which, having accomplished its allotted number of revolutions, is left for the ruthless hand of [illegible] to [illegible]. It is a curious freak in Nature, that she sometimes shapes trees and rocks to the resemblance of the human figure; Napoleon's likeness is seen in Mont Blanc; Bismark is also said to have his "mountain-portrait;" and here, in the Highlands, is "Anton's Nose." Whether named after "the noblest Roman of them all;" or some local hero of the days of Henry Hudson and the "Half-Moon," I am not able to inform you.

West Point—the Military School of the United States—where the young and tender military thought is reared, and taught "how to shoot," holds a footing right at the eastern entrance to "The Water-Gap," flanked on the north by Cornwall; a great summer resort for city people, who crowd in each season to the number of three or four thousand, and enjoy the freedom and economy of country life.

"Newburg Bay" opens up broad and beautiful, after our close quarters below. But the sun is now dipping below the line of vision, lighting up the few stray clouds with gorgeous golden tints, as we touch at Newburg, a city built upon a hill, with high aspirations, and justly proud of its old relic—"Washington's Head-Quarters"—which old, stone house is preserved in all its antiquity; the yard bristles with cannon—trophies of victory in military exploits—and, from the lofty flag-staff, the "Stars and Stripes" wave a perpetual defiance to all the world! Once upon a time I visited that interesting place, and was shown the thousand and one relics and curiosities collected there: The golden sash of Santa Anna; Lavega's sword; and relics of lesser note, not forgetting the little old brass tea kettle used by Washington; also, the bed on which he slept.

But, as day-light completely dies out, I watch the stars as they one by one seem to struggle through the deepening shade, and the hitherto sharply defined shores are becoming indistinct and shadowy, and seem to recede and die out with the day. Becoming chilled and weary, I left my look out, retired inside, where I monopolized a luxurious couch; and, with none to caress, no one to I—talk to me, I rather mistrust I nodded good-night several times to all the "carpet-baggers," and was trying "to leave the world awhile, for the soft visions of the gentle

ed J. WEYAND, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Beaver, Pa., Nov. 2, 1870.

LATE European dispatches say that Napoleon III. is to be sent to Elba, where the first Napoleon was held as a prisoner of War, many years ago.

THE election held in West Virginia on last Thursday for State officers, members of Congress and members of the Legislature, seems to have gone against the Republicans. The returns are not all in yet, but it is claimed that the Democrats have elected their candidate for Governor, a majority of the Congressmen, and on joint ballot will have the Legislature.

THE four boats, of the Steamer Cambria have been drifted ashore on the Irish coast—and empty. All hope of the rescue of the unfortunate passengers must therefore be abandoned. It will be remembered that, William Bingham jr., wife, and two children, and Miss Pusey of Pittsburgh were in one of the boats here referred to.

CHIEF JUSTICE CHASE of the United States Supreme Court, has been quite unwell, for some time past, and his friends are now considerably alarmed about his recovery. He recently wrote a letter to the Clerk of the Court, that he would not be in Wahington to open the term, which commenced on last Monday, and directed him to notify Justice Nelson to that effect, who will have to preside in the absence of the Chief Justice. The friends of Judge Chase believe that his complaint is incipient paralysis.

To show our readers what earthquakes sometimes do "we rise to explain." Near Loudonville, Ohio, on the day the shocks of an earthquake were felt in this latitude, a stream of water, about one foot in diameter, gushed out of a hillside with great violence, which has been running with about the same force ever since. No water had been seen there before. The ground for a considerable distance around the water spout seems to be slowly sinking. Long poles have been inserted but no bottom can be found. It has caused no little excitement in that vicinity.

IF any further proof of the correctness of the ARGUS' course in resisting the election of Dr. Shurlock, than that given during the campaign was needed, it is supplied in the communications of General Irwin, published since the election. Read these letters carefully, ye unsophisticated ones, who labored hard to return Dr. Shurlock to the Legislature, and then ask yourselves the question whether your efforts amounted, substantially, to anything more than to help Mr. Quay pay off debts contracted for illegitimate political purposes!

ALL the members of the President's Cabinet attended the meeting on Friday last, which continued three hours. The time was principally occupied in considering questions connected with the election law, and particularly as to New York, the general sentiment being that it should be strictly enforced, without detriment to the rights of any voters, but in the interest of all. Arrangements are now complete, so far as the military force is concerned, and orders to their commanders will soon be issued, enjoining upon them great caution so as to give no cause for a breach of peace, but to be in readiness to render such aid as may be necessary in the proper enforcement of the law.

SECRETARY COX took formal leave of the officers and Clerks of the Interior Department on last Saturday. It is understood that the retiring Secretary will take up his residence in Cincinnati, where he will engage in the practice of law. The correspondence between him and the President is published, and while no disagreement seems to have existed between the Secretary and his chief, it is nevertheless quite apparent that the latter was ready to accept General Cox's resignation the moment it was offered. The correspondence between Secretary Cox and several political committees is also made public. This correspondence shows that the Secretary of the Interior was virtually expelled from the Cabinet, because he would not suffer the political cormorants of the country to bleed his subordinates to death.

PARTIES who are intimately acquainted with the inner workings of the Radical office, inform us that when Rutan wants a puff he gets Quay to write it, and when Quay desires something laudatory of himself written, he has only to intimate his wish to Rutan, who thereupon takes his pen in hand, and daubs it on so thick that Quay is scarcely able to recognize himself in Rutan's productions. The two have formed a sort of a mutual admiration [illegible] nership, and the Radical seems to [illegible] now than to convince the public that the firm is composed of two very able truthful, and incorruptible men. With this explanation the reader will not find it a difficult matter to fasten the authorship of an article, in last weeks Radical, signed "S" on J. S. Rutan, wherein Quay is represented to be a perfect wonder in the way of managing campaigns, and manipulating voters. All this is very accomodating, to be sure, and we have no fault to find with the arrangement so far as the "puffing" of one by the other is concerned; but when "S." alias J. S. R. assumes to deride what we said a couple of weeks ago about "appeals to temperance and anti-temperance elements" being made during the recent canvass, we are inclined to get at the marrow of the subject, by asking him a question or two:

First, then, did you not, Mr. Rutan, seek out a number of Good Templars, before the election, and represent to them, that Mr. Shurlock was a good temperance man, favorable to prohibitory legislation, and point out to them the "Five Gallon Cider Law" for Beaver, as proof of what you were asserting?

Second, did you not afterwards visit some of the whisky dealers, in Rochester &c., and represent to them that Dr. Shurlock was not a temperance man, but Dr. Jackson was; and to prove this some old musty remonstrances against the granting of licenses, signed long ago by Dr. Jackson, were obtained from the Clerk's office, and exhibited to them? This was done, to get them to oppose Jackson, and support Shurlock, which they did, thus saving the latter from defeat. When these two points are disposed of, we shall call the Senator's attention to another subject or two, which merit notice.

ON next Tuesday (Nov. 8th,) a State election will be held in New York. The Republicans are running General Stewart L. Woodford for Governor, and the Democrats are seeking to re-elect Governor John T. Hoffman, for the same position. The canvass has thus far been an exciting one, both parties holding a large number of mass meetings.

In the city of New York, the Tammany Democrats have re-nominated Oakey Hall, for Mayor, and the young Democracy have taken up Thomas Ledwith for that office. The Republicans have made no nomination for Mayor, but the majority of the members of that party will give Ledwith their support. At a political meeting held a few evenings ago, Horace Greely made the following remarks:

Let us say a word about our local affairs. I believe it is the intention of the honest citizens of New York to start Thomas Ledwith for Mayor. [Great applause.] Mr. Ledwith does not belong to my party. I have voted before for men opposite to my own party when I thought good was to be obtained thereby. I urge the people to vote for Mr. Ledwith. If he deceives me, it is my own fault. Mr. Ledwith I do not know personally, I never saw him to my recollection. He has been a magistrate in this city for a good many years; and Tammany undertook to turn him out last year. The people of the district said: "No, no; Ledwith is right," and they set to work and elected him in spite of all opposition. You must now act vigorously, and elect men who will relieve this plundered city. These men, who enrich themselves at the public cost, must be turned out, and reform in the administration of our local affairs will then be certain. Vote for Ledwith and show that you can act outside of partisanship. Do this work to the best of your ability. Let us do it, one and all, and the city shall yet be redeemed and regenerated, and shall be in local government, as she is in commerce and population, the first city of the New World.

IN last week's Radical we notice an article copied from the Greensburg Tribune, in which Quay gets a "puff," and we get the following:

"The editor of the ARGUS has been exhibiting signs of restlessness and insubordination, and a spirit of jealously ever since the Radical was started."

On reading the above paragraph one would be led to conclude that this Greensburg editor was posted on ARGUS matters for the past two years, and that he knew all about even our private feelings; while the truth is we never heard of him before, never exchanged papers with him, never knew that such a paper as the Tribune existed, and not only does the ARGUS not circulate in his town, but not a copy of it that we know of goes into Westmorland county.—The presumption therefore is that this Greensburg man has never seen a copy of the ARGUS in his life, and that he knows just as much about us and our paper as we know about him and his paper, which is simply nothing at all. Were we to guess then, how such an article as the one referred to got into his paper, we would most undoubtedly say that it was written in Beaver, by either Quay or Rutan, and sent to the Tribune for publication at a cost of ten cents per line to the writer. When these gentlemen want to advertise themselves again it is to be hoped they will be a little more careful as to the newspaper they select to do it in.

THERE is in Berlin a woman whose life, so far, might be comprised in a single sentence: The widow of three cabinet-makers. She had married them all and lost them all within the last eight years, and they were all three killed in battle. In 1864, the first of her husbands fell at the storming of Duppel. She married again in 1865, and her second husband was left on the field of Sadowa in 1866. Cabinet-maker No. 3 was killed at the recent battle of Rezonville. Habit is second nature; and probably by this time she is beginning to look around in search of her fourth. But will she find another cabinet-maker brave enough to face the seeming fatality of a marriage with the widow of three defunct members of his craft, who have all died violent deaths?

THE trial by court-martial of the colored cadet at West Point being now over, very little can be said until the finding of the court is known. Thus much, however, is clear, that Cadet Smith has very respectable intellectual ability, and has shown a manly disposition to stand up for his rights. He appears to have been too prompt in breaking the cocoanut dipper over Cadet Wilson's head; but that member doubtless represented to him for the time the collective heads of the white cadets who had subjected him to humiliating ill-treatment. And whatever may be the result of the trial, officially, it is certain that Smith has lost no standing by it, even among those least favorably disposed toward him.

THE Republicans of the 5th Congressional district of Massachusetts have very properly renominated Gen. Butler. He is one of the most useful men in Congress, and should be continued there as long as he will consent to serve his constituency. In the 6th district the republicans have acted with equal wisdom in the renomination of Gen. Banks. A State that sends year after year, its best men to the national capital, deserves all the influence in public affairs its able representatives can wield.

ON the evening of the 18th ultimo, the Union League of Philadelphia met in pursuance of a special call, for the purpose of considering a proposed application to the Legislature for the call of a convention to amend the constitution of Pennsylvania. Resolutions were passed approving and recommending the calling of a convention, to be composed of delegates chosen by the freemen of the State, for the purpose of proposing amendments to the constitution of Pennsylvania, and urging that an application be made to the Legislature at its next session, for the passage of a proper Act submitting the question to the people for their decision at an election to be held for the special purpose on the first Tuesday in May, next, or at some other convenient time.

THE Treasury ring managers from this part of the State are on at Philadelphia and Harrisburg, settling things up. We would warn Republican Senators and members elect that the eyes of the people will be upon them, and that if the old trick succeeds this winter, of buying a nomination, and then securing the election by applying the party lash to the backs of Republicans, the supporters of such a measure will have a fearful account to settle with his constituents.—Lawrence Journal.

We need scarcely add that Beaver county furnished two or three delegates to the conclave referred to by the Journal. They have however returned home again, and all of them look as innocent as though their mission east had not been to devise ways and means to fleece the people out of their hard earned money.

The Census Muster Rolls.

The Leavenworth Bulletin has an amusing "take off" on the pretensions to vast populations by Missouri river cities previous to the census, and sums up the actual condition of things, after the marshal's books have been made up as follows:

Omaha, before the census	50,000
Omaha, after the census	13,000
Killed, wounded and missing	37,000
Council Bluffs, before the census	30,000
Council Bluffs, after the census	11,000

METZ YIELDS.

Bazaine Capitulates!

150,000 PRISONERS!!

Bazaine Declared a Traitor.

BERLIN, Oct. 27.—The King telegraphs to the Queen to-day:

This morning Bazaine and Metz capitulated, 150,000 prisoners, including 20,000 sick and wounded of the army and garrison, laid down their arms. This is one of the most important events of the war. Providence be thanked.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—Your special correspondent at Ostend telegraphs: The statement received from Merey Lehant, to the effect that upon receiving a formal declaration signed by the Empress that she was unwilling to sign a treaty involving the cession of French territory, or to be a party to any scheme involving the probable outbreak of civil war in France, Bazaine exclaimed he would take all necessary responsibility himself. This was Wednesday night. Bazaine immediately sent a parlementaire through his lines to Prince Frederick Charles, at Pont-a-Mausson. The Prince came up during the night to Chateau de Frescaty, where this morning early stipulations were signed for the surrender of the army of Bazaine and the fortress of Metz. The report adds: Gen. De Coffinieres, commandant of the garrison of Metz, entered a written protest against the surrender, declaring that he was abundantly able to protect the defence into the winter; that the recent defeats of the Germans had made it specially impossible for them to imperil the place, and that provisions were in abundance both for the army and the population. Since the 15th of October the inhabitants had received daily rations of 400 grammes of bread for adults, 200 100 grammes for children and 100 grammes for infants.

A correspondent at Ostend says the total loss of the army of Prince Frederick Charles from the beginning of the siege is estimated at 45,000 men by battle and disease. The army of Frederick Charles consisted, on the 20th of October, of the 1st, 2d, 3d, 7th, 9th, and 10th army corps, with two divisions of Landwehr attached to the ninth army corps, making a total of 160,000 men, artillery and cavalry included.

The surrender of Bazaine it is stated has been made upon a full undertaking with the Prussian Government that the occupation of Metz and Strasburg shall be accepted as an adequate basis for the withdrawing of the German armies from France and concluding peace.

The republicans in London loudly declare Marshal Bazaine a traitor; that he concerted his action with Prince Napoleon, the Empress and King William, and that the Government at Paris and Tours will repudiate any peace prepared or signed by him.

In spite of all rumors about the surrender of Metz, French loan has advanced in price all day. M. Laurier is arranging for the expenditure of a large amount of the loan in the purchase of arms at Birmingham.

BERLIN, Oct. 29.—The Krerz Zeitung says: The last summons to surrender has been forwarded and the military authorities inside the Paris fortifications notified that the bombardment of the city will begin early next week.

BERLIN, Oct. 27.—News of the capitulation of Metz was communicated to Napoleon yesterday. The Emperor's house is in great suspense and consternation.

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—King William telegraphs as follows to the Queen:

VERSAILLES, Oct. 29.—The defeat of the two hostile armies which recently marched against us warrants me in conferring on two commanders, Prince Frederick Charles, the batons of Field Marshals, the first instances of such appointments in our family history.

[Signed.] "WILLIAM."

CONSTITUTIONAL REFORM.

On several occasions we have invited our readers to a consideration of the important question of a convention to revise the constitution of the State. We are pleased to notice that our cotemporaries of all parties join us heartily in advocating this movement, and those not ready to openly espouse it, manifest a willingness to hear what can be said upon the subject, and are in favor of a fair and full presentation of the matter to the public. This, perhaps, is all we have a right to expect at present, and we shall from time to time, lay before our readers additional facts and arguments, for public consideration. We are strongly impressed with both the importance and necessity of the proposed reform, and shall labor for it accordingly. At the same time, we are aware of the reluctance of our people to make radical changes in our fundamental law, except upon good and satisfactory reasons. This is as it should be; and in the nature of things, all that has yet been said and done is only preliminary, and intended to direct public attention into the proper channels. In all great movements much depends on a right beginning. But somebody must begin; and the initiative taken by the Union League, of Philadelphia, last week, appears to have been in the proper spirit.

They pronounced emphatically in favor of a convention to amend our State constitution, the action of which when completed shall be submitted to a popular vote of the people for adoption or rejection; and they appointed a committee to bring the matter to the attention of the people, and to confer with all persons and parties who were willing to co-operate in the good work. This is not a partisan movement, and we are glad of it, and hope and expect all who are friendly, to carefully guard against making it, or even give it the appearance of, partisanship. We have an abiding faith in the intelligence and patriotism of our people, and know that upon full deliberation they will both favor the revision, and see to it that the best men in the State are chosen to the convention that shall be called to perform this work. We trust that the leaders of the Democratic party will take action that will give us a committee to consult with the League committee, for the purpose of securing the passage of a proper authorization act early next winter.—State Journal.

IRWIN HITS THEM AGAIN.

My communication in the ARGUS of Oct. 26th, I see is published in extenso in the Radical of last week. It is well. It has thus gone to many persons from whom light and truth on the subject of political intrigue and rascality are habitually and persistently withheld. Mr. Quay's reply to that article would have had a greater effect upon the public mind if it had borne the stamp of originality; more point if it had successfully controverted specific charges. His quotation answered "Old Ben. Butler's" purpose once in Congress; since then, it has become stale from its too frequent use by kite-flyers, school-boys, and politicians at bay. Quay is sore under the truth of the charges made against him; and fearing further developements, cries out peccavi; "shoo fly," etc.; which means, "I have sinned, don't bother me."

I wish it distinctly understood by the public that M. S. Quay borrowed twenty-five thousand dollars, at the command of the Cameron clan last winter; placed it in the "corruption fund" for the purpose of bribing members of the Legislature to vote for the nomination of R. W. Mackey as Republican candidate for State Treasurer; that he pledged his Railroad and Bank stocks as collateral security for the money; that his note, endorsed by R. W. Mackey, is now in bank over due for that amount of money; that through Mr. Quay's management, Messrs. Rutan and Shurlock—after having voluntarily assured me in the most positive language that they should go for my nomination to that office—were trotted off and made to sign a written pledge for Mackey; that said Mackey, after having received the nomination by the Republican Legislative caucus by means of a liberal use of the bribery fund so as aforesaid raised by Quay and the Cameron ring, was defeated in the Legislature; that in consequence of such defeat, Quay was left without the anticipated resources from which to pay the borrowed twenty-five thousand dollars of bribery money, and is therefore still held for that sum; that M. S. Quay is still further involved in a note over due, endorsed by G. M. Lauman, for fifteen thousand dollars. These notes must be paid. How is it to be done? By Quay's reply to my last communication he leaves the public to infer what is simply correct: that the above charges are substantially and literally true. It is not to be supposed he intends to pay these rascally political debts out of his private purse. Not he. Where, then, will the money be procured to liquidate them. There can be but one answer. The people of the Commonwealth are expected to foot the bill. If Mackey should be elected State Treasurer next winter, a portion if not all of this bribery debt will no doubt be paid out of the interest on "unexpended balances" as he is accustomed to manipulate them; because, in that business he is an expert, as may readily be conceived from the fact that during his administration of the State Treasury he only succeeded in reducing the State debt about five hundred thousand dollars, and a larger portion of that at three per cent. premium; whereas, I have paid nearly one million and a half dollars of public debt at par, in less than six months. What did Mr. Mackey do with his surplus? But, should defeat again follow in the wake of the ring candidate for State Treasurer, then some "Border Raid bill," or other equally objectionable scheme for robbing the Treasury will have to be "snaked" through the Legislature to get the necessary funds to pay this corruption indebtedness. From this point of view it may appear to even superficial observers how all-important it was for M. S. Quay to secure—beyond all peradventure—the return to the Legislature of Dr. Shurlock. He has had him in his toils ever since he compelled him last winter to give up his manhood and violate his unsought pledges in the Treasury contest; and, in his re-election he has a supple tool in the House of Representatives for working his nefarious schemes for public plunder through that body.—Mr. Shurlock was not the nominee of a majority of the Republican party of Beaver county; he was placed on the ticket through fraud, and because Quay dare not return to Harisburg without him. He was elected by fifteen majority in a district that usually gives from six to eight hundred Republican majority; that is the way his and Rutan's course is endorsed. His defeat would have cost Quay his standing in the "Cameron ring;" and as he has long since forfeited all claims upon the regard of any other branch of the Republican party, he would become politically defunct. If it be true that the people of Beaver county—as claimed by Messrs. Rutan and Shurlock—have endorsed their course in the Legislature last winter, they should not complain if they are called upon in the future to pay, in the shape of increased taxation, a portion of this corruption fund.

Every observant man, familiar with public life and the character of public men for a series of years, will concur in the opinion, that no political man who turns his back upon his early and confidential friends can succeed. Life is too short to build up two distinct set of friends. Mr. Quay committed this great political blunder in selling himself to the Cameron faction. In doing so, he forfeited the confidence and esteem of his former associates; and only while he can be useful to his newly formed ones, will he retain their respect. "They love the treason, but despise the traitor."

As further evidence that Quay is owned by Cameron, it is only necessary to state that the latter gentleman arranged matters at Washington to have Quay appointed U. S. Supervising Inspector of Internal Revenue in the Western District of Pennsylvania, at a salary of twenty-five hundred dollars per annum, and was only defeated by the friends of General Sweitzer getting wind of the scheme of the "ring" before its consummation and in time to thwart it. Had he succeeded, the twenty-five hundred dollars salary would have been the smaller portion of the perquisites of the office, as his previous experience in the "whiskey business" would have been of great pecuniary advantage to him.—Vide Quay vs. Editor Argus, libel.

Last winter, subsequently to the election of State Treasurer, Quay called upon Mr. Adaire, member of the House from Philadelphia, who was reclining on a bed in a room at the Jones House in Harrisburg, and said: "So, Adaire, you went back on me in the election for State Treasurer, and voted for Irwin?"

"Yes," replied Adaire, "and you went back on your friends in 1867, and sold Curtin for Cameron."

"Repeat that," responded Quay, "and I will shoot you."

"Shoot, and be hanged!" exclaimed Adaire.

Whereupon the valiant Colonel, in a spirit of bravado, banged away—the ball passing through the headboard of the couch upon which Adaire was reposing. He immediately arose and ejected Quay from the room. Now, it is not intended to intimate that he had any serious intent to do bodily injury to Adaire; but merely to exhibit a little of the bravery he proved so wonderfully on the field of battle. I cite this little political episode merely to show the light in which Quay's treachery was viewed by the generality of the leading Republican politicians of the eastern part of the State.

I desire the public should distinctly understand that I have no wish to be involved in a newspaper war; nor would I now appear in such a conflict if self-defence had not forced me into it. It will not be forgotten by this community with what virulence and bitterness M. S. Quay has attacked and pursued me through the columns of his paper, The Beaver Radical, ever since it had an existence. Especially was this the case last fall and winter; and more recently, during the late political canvass, has that paper sought occasion to vilify, calumniate and abuse me in terms the most gross and vulgar. The truth is, the Radical was established by Cameron's money for the express purpose of subserving his interests and those of the cliques and rings at Harrisburg with which he is connected, and for no other. The moment it ceases to follow the prescribed conditions of its founder, Quay—who is but his managing editor and paid tool—will be left without visible means of support; hence he is compelled to abuse all who oppose Cameron and his political coadjutors.

J. S. Rutan, alias the not. pros. man, again speaketh without affidavit. He declines further controversy. I am not so amicably disposed toward one who sought occasion to assure me of his unqualified and hearty support, while at the instant he was secretly plotting my defeat, and who took the earliest opportunity to make that secret plotting manifest. I admit, no further notice should be taken of such a person than his official position would seem to demand. I charged the two-faced Senator with having said to an agent of the Pennsylvania railroad, just prior to his—Rutan's—leaving Harrisburg last session, to "put him down for anything that company might want next winter." Mr. R.—the affydavy man—has been after an affidavit, or certificate, or written statement from an agent of that company to the effect that he (Rutan) never made such a proposition. He was refused; but he says the agent denies ever having circulated such a story. If we had anything to corroborate the Senator's interested statement on this point some credence might be accorded it; but his word, unsupported—where his interest is involved—is not as reliable as it otherwise would be. The truth is, the railroad agent told that story on Rutan publicly, in the presence of several witnesses, just subsequent to its utterance.

There never were two Representatives sent to the Legislature from Beaver county, since its organization, who carry with them so little public confidence as J. S. Rutan and W. C. Shurlock. They have sought every occasion to instil into the public mind the idea that their conduct last winter has been indorsed by their constituents. At the County Convention last Spring, they made an unsuccessful effort in that direction. So, again, at the meeting of the County Committee in September last, Rutan and Shurlock sought to have their under-handed treachery in the Treasury matter of last winter, endorsed; and, in order to succeed, coupled with the resolution in endorsement of their opposition to the nine-million railroad bill, for which they would have voted if the man "they are bound to save"—M. S. Quay—had been permitted, by those engineering the bill, to have "got his hooks in." In that shape the resolution was passed by a packed Committee, which intended to force the nomination of M. S. Quay upon the Convention as delegate to the State Convention next year, but in that they were defeated.

Again, after the late fall election, when Quay and Rutan returned from their mysterious night railroad excursion in answer to a telegram requiring their attendance on the night preceding the meeting of the return Judges, and the reported Democratic majority of fifteen was so suddenly transferred to Dr. Shurlock, they burned gunpowder, decorated their rooms and offices with flags, and published in the Radical the modest gratitude and heartfelt joy of Messrs. Rutan and Shurlock for this triumphant endorsement on the part of their constituents of their previous legislative record. Their efforts for indorsement are so persistent and frequent as to have become a nuisance; they stink in the nostrils of the people. If they have not been erratic, why this feverish anxiety for public endorsement? Honest, upright, fair-dealing public servants never beg and whine after endorsements. Their conduct vindicates them. I have filled offices of public trust, both county and state, during the last ten years, and in no instance have I had occasion for or sought public endorsement. I leave my official conduct with the public in the full confidence of having honestly discharged it.

Rutan! bring on the affidavits that you did not pledge yourself to an agent of the Pa. Railroad company, last winter "to put you down for anything they might wish;" otherwise you cannot have a not. pros. entered in this case however much you may desire it. It is said the "nolle prosequi" was your strongest hold when District Attorney.

The Beaver Radical will please copy, and oblige W. W. IRWIN.

ALDERMAN WILLIAM M'MULLIN, one of the honorable and trusted leaders of the 4th ward Philadelphia Democracy, and long known as a most reckless and desperate bully, got himself excellently well thrashed by a colored voter on election day, to his utter amazement and surprise. The Philadelphia Evening Telegraph details the affair in this wise:

At Eighth and Shippen street is the poll of the Eighth division of the Fourth ward, the "Old Reliable" of the Democratic host. This is "Mully's" ward, and perhaps in no habitable portion of the earth is there such a deadly enmity against the colored voter as that entertained by the intelligent Democracy of the Fourth ward. It was bad enough that the negrs should be disenthralled, but when he was made coequal politically with the law-abiding and loyal denizens of the Fourth, patience had ceased to be a virtue, and the breast of each and every Democrat swelled with righteous indignation. They vowed that, at least in the Eighth precinct no ignoble son of Ham should have a ghost of a chance. No sooner, then, was the line formed than "Mully"—he of the valiant "Moya"—paraded up and down its length with an Alexander Selkirk look in his mild and loving eye. At his back an unknown force would disrupt the line, and a colored voter would directly find himself in the street or at the tail end of the procession to the polls.

BILLY M'MULLIN WHIPPED.

"Mully," however, went too far. There was in the line a dusky freeman by the name of Thomas Hall.

Mully grabbed him with, "Come out here, you ——. You're no voter.

Whereupon Hall made no verbal response, but drawing back a huge arm administered a smashing blow to Mully's face, which keeled Billy the Great upon the pavement.

Mully jumped up, struck out wildly with his left, and again was persuaded to return to dust by an equally forcibly blow.

Being, however, overpowered, Hall was captured and taken to the Fifth District Station. The effect of the skirmish was salutary, and thereafter no more disturbances occurred.

This will afford another irresistable Democratic argument to prove that there is great danger of the negro race supplanting the whites and making them little better than slaves.—The Harrisburg State Journal.

DIAMONDS BY THE LOAD.

The Newly Discovered Diamond Diggings in South Africa—Rough Diamonds as Plenty as Boys' Jack Stones.

The report from the diamond diggings of the Cape of Good Hope read like a page from Sinbad the Sailor. He is plastered with mud from the river beds, in which are imbedded gems of immense value, rough diamonds, worth a prince's ransom, worn in the gaudy coiffure of African belles, and traders pockets filled with the same precious jewels, like little boys' with jack stones, are among their features. The digging is most active on the Vaal and Orange rivers, including a district about as large as the State of Massachusetts. The three principal diggins have netted $5,000,000 up to the present time. The miners simply go to digging when they arrive, and always find their claim pans turn out richly. A reception given by President Brandt, of the Transvaal Republic, at Bloemfontein, is described by a correspondent as gotten up for the almost express purpose of giving Vaal River diamonds a regular display. Some of the "court" ladies present appeared to be almost loaded down with diamonds. One lady in particular made a special display of the precious jewels. Her dark hair was rolled and puffed, and fairly studded with brilliants. She wore ring clusters outside of her white kids, and gold bracelets with galaxies of stary gems. On her bosom she wore a single brilliant valued at £10,000. The heavy flounces of her dress were looped up all around and fastened with clusters of the same precious jewels. A person might have walked behind her in the crowd and plucked fortunes from her person by the handful.

Important to Pulmonary Patients.

To give relief to Pulmonary Consumption is oftentimes all that is sought for in the administration of remedies. We know of extreme cases that have been cured—cures are not common however, and perhaps for the reason that few persons believe in its curability, and allow their lungs to be consumed in a fatal misapprehension. That far gone cases of consumption have been cured by Dr. Keyser's Lung Cure is hardly to be questioned, especially when persons who have been cured can be pointed out to any who choose to make the inquiry of them. These cases are near at hand, in this city, and within a short walk of the Doctor's office. The Doctor, doubtless does not pretend to cure every case; nor does he claim that the lung cure will always cure, without his personal direction, in many cases it will. In every case it will relieve, and it will surely cure the incipient symptoms that lead to that dreadful scourge; in other words, it will cure when application is made to it in time. The incredulous will not squander much in a bare trial either of time or money. The Doctor will examine your lungs if you call on him, at his office, 197 Liberty street, Pittsburgh, Pa. Office hours from 9 a. m. until 1 p. m., and from 3 until 6, and on Saturdays, from 7 to 9 at night. $1,50 per bottle, if your druggist does not keep it, send five dollars to Dr. Keyser, and he will send four bottles securely boxed, by express, with full directions how to use it.

ROYAL AND NOBLE.

An English Princess to Marry a Subject of Her Mother.

For the first time in many years, a member of the English Royal family is to marry a British subject. The Princess Louisa, the fourth daughter of Queen Victoria, and now about twenty-two years of age, is about to be married to the Marquis of Lorne, eldest son of the Duke of Argyle, one of the few Liberals in the House of Lords and a steady friend to the North, during our late war. The young man is about twenty-eight year of age. He made an extensive tour a few years ago through the United States.

He is said to be a person of decided character and religious convictions, and this is purely a love match, a sort of a thing that the Queen, after her happy life with Prince Albert thoroughly believes in. It will certainly have a good effect in breaking down the extreme conventionalities by which the English court is surrounded, and making it more accessible in the future. Besides this the little German Duchies that were always ready to supply husbands, to order, to English royal heiresses, are all being rapidly swallowed up in all-embracing Vaterland, and henceforth England will have to look elsewhere for her supply.

A vein of yellow ochre has been discovered near Osage City, Kansas, of a very pure quality.

NEWS SUMMARY.

—Fragments of the steamer Cambria have washed ashore on the coast of Antrim and Donegal.

—Captains G. Hartwell, W. H. Hugo, Dewitt C. Poole and Major J. M. Goodhue are relieved from duty as Indian Agents.

—Gov. Haight, of California, urges a call of an extra session of the Legislature to reconstruct the Congressional districts.

—Mary Hughes, of Moulton county, Illinois, has been sentenced to fifteen years in the Penitentiary for the murder of her child.

—A number of small business houses in Cameron, Missouri, were burned on Monday night, involving a loss of $40,000. Insurance about $25,000

—An unhappy Michigan couple have got three divorces among them, in as many courts, the wife two and the husband one. They are bound to be unbound.

—Cambridge, Crawford county, has a cheese factory of nine hundred cow-power—at least the Meadville Journal says it requires that number of cows to run it with milk.

—Fred Oberkinder was tried in Evansville on Saturday, for the murder of Valentine Arnold, and was convicted of manslaughter and sent to prison for five years.

—Chicago has developed "railway scalping," by which an individual who leads a traveler up to a ticket office gets a commission on the ticket purchased by the latter. Some poor men have been nearly torn to pieces by the efforts of rival scalpers.

—It is said woods along the line of the P. & E. railroad are unusually full of game this fall. The deer are very fat, and preparations for venison steak are being made, while the hunters are getting their "shooting-irons" in readiness.

—Mr. Baldwin, of Cresco, and Mr. and Mrs. James C. Smith, of Allamakee county, Iowa, were thrown from a buggy a short time since. Mr. Baldwin was instantly killed, Mrs. Smith so severely injured that her recovery is doubtful, and Mr. Smith hurt severely but not dangerously.

—While Jerry Eaton, a farmer in Benton county, Indiana, was plowing, a few days ago, the ground suddenly gave way, and he and his team fell some ten feet into a cave, from which he managed to escape with great difficulty. One of the horses was killed.

—The ways of retribution are mysterious, but certain and reliable. At Corry the other night a 'valise buster' while pitching a 'Saratoga' into a car, had all his front teeth knocked out, by the trunk falling back on him. A little more and the wind would have been knocked out of his trunk, but he lives to warn others.

—Charles Banquis, of Galesburg, was found guilty by the Knox county, Illinois, Circuit Court of committing a rape on a little girl only nine years old, some time during last August. He was sentenced to twenty-one years' imprisonment, with hard labor, in the Penitentiary. The prisoner is twenty-one years of age.

—Ah Quong was locked up in the Marysville, California, jail for burglary a few nights ago. Next morning he was missing. He had sawed off his grated cell door with an old razor, picked a hole through a brick wall, and with a rope ladder made of strips of blanket scaled the outer wall. "The heathen Chinee is peculiar.

—The Marquette Express says that the Duck Brigade, from Portage, lately operating near Montelle, give up that the ducks are too many for them. While they have killed, perhaps, hundreds and wounded many more, there is not a duck less about the headquarters of Lake Puckaway. The ducks maintain their position, and claim a victory.

—On Wednesday night of last week, a tool car caught fire at the depot, at Elkhart, Indiana, and a young man rushing in to save his effects, was burned to death. The door of the car had a spring bolt, and immediately after he went in it closed and locked itself. There was help present, but, before the door could be opened, the young man was dead.

—Some scapegraces in Dubuque, Sunday evening, hung a dead rat over the limb of a tree, in such a manner that they could raise or lower it at will. When people came along from church, the rat was lowered to their faces. One chap left two fair attendants and bounded away with a shriek, leaving one fair young lady to faint, and the other yelling "murder!"

—Mrs. E. A. Pollard, a lady who acquired considerable notoriety in Baltimore a year ago in connection with a shooting affray in which she seriously injured a gentleman who refused to inform her of the whereabouts of Mr. Pollard, has been sent to the Government Asylum for the Insane, upon the order of Judge Otto, acting Secretary of the Interior, two physicians certifying to her mental condition, and two citizens to her being without means for her support. This once proud and beautiful woman and happy wife and mother is now an inmate of a lunatic asylum, the receipient of the charities of the government. She has hardly reached the prime of life. The cause of Mrs. Pollard's insanity is said to be a scandal with which she was mixed up at the St. Cloud Hotel in this city a short time since. It seems what purported to be the facts in the case got into a flash paper in New York, and her grief on that account assumed such a violent form that she became crazed.—N. Y. Herald.

Bear testimony to their Wonderful Curative effects.
WHAT ARE THEY?

THEY ARE NOT A VILE
FANCY DRINK.
Made of Poor Rum, Whisky, Proof Spirits, and Refuse Liquors, doctored, spiced, and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true medicine, made from the native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and Life Giving Principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter, and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell.
$100 will be given for an incurable case, provided the bones are not destroyed by mineral poisons, or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.
For Inflammatory & Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers; Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by the derangement of the Digestive Organs.
Cleanse the vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in pimples, eruptions, tetters, or sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

Extensive Fire at New Castle.—On last Friday morning at about 2 o'clock a fire broke out in the extensive works known as the Croton Glass works of that city, owned by C. Ihmsen, jr., burning the entire works with considerable stock which was at the works, also burning four dwellings owned by the same party. The fire is supposed to have caught from the furnaces belonging to the works. The total loss is fifty-five thousand dollars, covered by an insurance of thirty-three thousand dollars. The effect of the fire is to throw over one hundred and fifty men out of employment, and is considered a serious loss to the city. The works will probably be rebuilt immediately.

Administrator's Sale.—The administrators of the estate of the late Wm. Davidson, sr., of Bridgewater, will offer a large lot of personal property at public sale on the 9th of November, on the farm near Darlington Pa. Persons in want of cattle, grain, farming implements &c., should attend the sale.

☞ Medical Electricity. — Dr. J. S. Winans is fully prepared to treat all kinds of disease, by this method. I can give the best references as to its success, in many cases at hand. Chronic Disease of all kinds made a speciality.—See essay on medical electricity by S. E. Adams in next week's ARGUS. Office and residence, Diamond, Rochester, Pa. nv2;3t

A large assortment of new goods just received, including fancy patterns of fall prints, fancy dry goods, notions, trimmings, lace collars and jewelry, at A. C. Hurst's, Bridgewater, Pa.

The Chandalier in the room of the Young Men's Christian Association of this place fell the other night, and the lamps in it were all broken to pieces. Spriggs, the gasoline man, will no doubt now be called upon to put up his gas fixtures in the room where the accident occurred. He has the best thing out in the way of furnishing light.

FALL OPENING at I. Hanauer's Bazar of Fashion, Bridgewater, Pa. sept. 21:tf.

We regret to learn that our old friend James Young, who resides near Darlington, Beaver county, Pa., recently met with a serious accident.—Mr. Young, who is seventy-four years of age, fell from a tree while engaged in picking apples, dislocating his shoulder and receiving other injuries.

FREEDOM, Oct. 31, 1870.

MR. EDITOR:—Allow me to occupy a brief space in your columns to defend myself against those who would injure my reputation and business by foul slander of alleged incompetency and inability to attend to my own business as a Druggist. The instigator of this charge has been making every available exertion to impress it on the minds of the people; and he asserts a mistake by me in not giving a certain article called for, but have given something else, to prove my ignorance of the different articles. A few days since, two young ladies called at my Drug Store and asked for Gum-Arabic, which I gave them in a pulverized form. On the day following, one of said young ladies called to return her purchase, saying it was not Gum Arabic, and she could not use it. I informed her that it was the article (Gum Arabic) called for by her; she retorted that it was not Gum Arabic, for Dr. Stewart said it was Arrowroot. I imediately called on the other lady who told me the same story, and that her purchase was in the possession of the aforesaid Doctor who had pronounced it Arrowroot. I have sent the article which the lady returned (which article Dr. Stewart said was not Gum Arabic but Arrowroot) to five of the best Druggists of Beaver county, who all pronounce it Gum Arabic of the best quality. And now I desire the people of this community to know that the mistake is the aforesaid would be Dr. Stewart's and not mine; and having devoted three years and a half fitting myself for the business, I feel competent to attend to it, but if I should need assistence, I surely would not ask it of a man who who styles himself Doctor, but don't know the difference betwen Gum Arabic and Arrowroot. "Persons who live in glass house should not throw stones."

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

In continuance of an honored State and national custom, and in devout acknowledgement of human dependence upon Almighty favor, I do hereby appoint Thursday, the twenty-fourth day of November next, as a day of general Thanksgiving and praise, being the same day, and for the same ends and uses, set forth by his Excellency, the President of the United States, in his proclamation of the twenty-first instant.

Pennsylvania, unsurpassed in blessings, should not be surpassed by any in acknowledging her gratitude to God. Let us, then, as citizens of the Commonwealth, abstain as far as possible, from our usual avocations on that day, and assemble at our respective places of worship, and let us there, and in the festivities of our assembled families at our cherished homes, rejoice in the goodness of God, and render thanks to Him for His loving kindness and His abundant mercy toward us. Let our thanksgiving and praise find expression in dedicating the day to deeds of benevolence and charity, and administering to, and alleviating the wants of the poor, the needy, and the suffering; so that all may "rejoice and be exceeding glad." "To do good and to distribute, forget not; for with such sacrifice God is well pleased."

Let us invoke Divine favor upon our beloved State and nation, and pray that all who are called to administer their governments may be actuated by the "spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge, and the fear of the Lord."

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State, at Harrisburg, this twenty-eighth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy, and of the Commonwealth the ninety-fifth.

JNO: W. GEARY.

By the Govenor:
F. JORDAN,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

New Brighton Seminary.—This Institution is already deservedly popular. The teachers are thorough scholars. The course of study is full—English, Scientific and Classical—with Musical and Normal Departments. As a boarding-school for girls, none is more pleasant and healthful. It is a Home, not a prison. The winter session will begin on Monday, the 5th of December next.

☞ The Little Corporal Magazine, for November, is a beautiful number of a most beautiful juvenile—good enough for the most exacting. Since its enlargement and improvement, and the addition of fine full page and other engravings, The Little Corporal is worthy of a circulation of at least a hundred thousand. The remaining numbers of 1870 are offered free to all who subscribe now for the next year. Don't fail to give your children this sterling juvenile magazine. It is published in Chicago, Illinois, by Sewell & Miller, at one dollar and a half a year, 15 cents for a single copy. Beautiful and generous premiums are given for clubs.

Gen. W. W. Irwin.—We were shown a handsome present for Gen. Irwin, from Samuel Mason & Sons. It is a pruning-knife with five different shaped blades and a saw, enclosed in a neat morocco case, with the General's name on each blade. The knife is to be hereafter called "The Irwin Pruning Knife." The blades are of the finest steel, and the whole thing gotten up in good style, and can be seen for a few days at Winter & Bedison's jewelry store.—Beaver Valley Herald.

GEORGE P. ROWELL & Co. of New York, the well-known and enterprising advertising agents, have purchased the agency of John Hooper & Co. of the same city, an equally well-known and reliable firm, and by the union of the two will have by far the largest and most flourishing advertising establishment in the country; and if it is as well managed in the future as in the past it cannot fail to become still more gigantic and successful. Messrs. Rowell & Co. publish the American newspaper Directory, the most complete volume of the kind ever issued in this or any other country, and at their New York office they keep on file more than five thousand periodicals, which are always open to the free use of their patrons when in New York. Both the retiring partners of the late firm of J. Hooper & Co., are to remain with Geo. P Rowell & Co., for some months, until their own business matters can be adjusted, after which Mr. Wayre contemplates going abroad, and Mr. John Hooper, who has been elected treasurer of the Colwells, Shaw and Willard manufacturing company, of New York, will give his attention to the introduction of the patent tin-lined lead pipe, an article of great merit, extensively manufactured and sold by that company.—Springfield Republican, Oct. 18th, 1870.

Young Men's Christian Association.—The Third Annual Convention of Young Men's Christian Associations of the State of Pennsylvania, will convene at Scranton Luzerne county, on Tuesday, Nov. 8th, 1870, closing its session on Thursday evening. Delegates are expected from all the Associations in the State, among whom will be many of our most prominent ministers and earnest Christian workers. A most cordial invitation is extended to ministers and Christian laymen, in town and country districts where there are no Associations, to come to the Convention. A most hearty Christian welcome is assured to all who come, and arrangements will be made for their entertainment, as well as for reduced fare on railroads.

All who design attending, are requested to address Thomas K. Cree, Chairman State Executive Committee, Pittsburgh, that they may avail themselves of these privileges.

On a "Bender."—The Easton Express states that Baby Anna, the infant elephant belonging to Forepaugh's show, for some reason or other, woke up in a pet one morning last week, and when her master kindly asked her to pack up her trunk, and steer for Bethlehem, she emphatically refused to do so. Her elder brother Romeo—of Shakesperian notoriety—slowly move dalong the road indicated to him, in company with his hump-backed coinpanion, but the little brat refused to follow the train. All coaxing was in vain, she refused to listen to the softest words and the most subtle arguments. Whether Bethlehem was too dry and puritancal a place for a baby of her lively and frivolous nature, or whether she wanted her "teddy" before going remains a mystery, but she showed her utter aversion to going to Bethlehem, by turning in every other direction. Finally, Romeo and the camel, becoming tired of waiting, and her master being anxious to reach Bethlehem someime, commenced to belabor the little baby's hide with clubs, which, after a long time, had the desired effect, and prevailed on the little Anna to move on, surlily and unwillingly.

Fatal Accident.—A lad aged about fifteen years, son of Samuel Jones, residing near Gentleman's run camp ground, in Brooke county, W. Va., was fatally injured, on Thursday of last week, under the following circumstances: He was driving a calf from the farm of a relative, Ellis Jones, of Independence township, this county, when the animal turned and endeavored to regain its old home. Becoming somewhat excited, he urged the horse he was riding to a high rate of speed, and the horse, overtaking the calf, stumbled over it and fell to the ground, at the same time falling upon the boy, who had been unseated and thrown. The injuries inflicted, were of so serious a nature as to cause death the day following. He was a bright little fellow, and his sudden death is deeply and widely lamented.—Washington Review and Examiner.

Reminiscences of the Past.—The Lawrence Journal says: An old gentleman by the name of William McGaffick, on his way from Centreville, Butler county, Pa., to Alliance, Ohio, to visit a sister, stopped at the Cochran House, in this city this week. The old gentleman is eighty years of age, and in good state of preservation. He says he was a musician in the recruiting service of the United States during the war of 1812, and played the fife on the streets of New Castle for "Uncle Sam," when he was not so big a boy as he now is. Mr. McGaffick then resided in Greersburg, now Darlington, Beaver county. He says John Samuels was a recruiting officer on the corner of North and Beaver streets in this place, which was a small log house. He spoke of being acquainted with a man by the name of John Moore, who was also a fifer in the war of 1812; Moore, it seems, was the father of J. J. Moore, of this city, who says he has the identical instrument on which his father played at that time, in his possession, which he will exhibit to any one who may wish to see such a relic of the past. John Moore was an inhabitant of Greersburg at the time of the war. The old gentleman talked of the events of those days with great animation.

To the friends of Deceased Soldiers.—Some time ago Gen. Meigs, Quarter-Master General of the United States Army, in concert with Gen. John A. Logan, Commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, issued an order relative to the graves of deceased soldiers. They desired to know where all soldiers and ex-soldiers who died during and since the rebellion, were buried in the respective counties, and asked that this information be furnished them, through the commanders of the different Posts of the Grand Army of the Republic. To what object this information is to be applied we do not at present know—probably to erect tombstones or exercise some other care over the graves of the departed. As there are but two Posts of the Grand Army of the Republic in this county, the duty imposed upon the undersigned is too onerous to be performed by them alone: they have therefore thought it expedient to ask the co-operation of the following named gentlemen in the several townships and boroughs of Beaver county:

Big Beaver.—William H Foster, Samuel Blair.
Beaver bor.—John Harton, Hugh Anderson.
Borough tp.—J B Harrah, E Barnes.
Bridgewater.—S H Darragh, Robert Anderson.

Ohio tp.—R McKeague, W F Dawson.
Patterson tp.—S C Dickey.
Phillipsburg.—W G Taylor, A Frank.
Pulaski tp.—D M Daugherty, E Smith.
Raccoon tp.—William Ewing, Robert Potter.
Rochester bor.—A P Lacock, J S Darragh.
Rochester tp.—J J Foster.
South Beaver.—Johnston Lawrence, N J McCormick.
St. Clair bor.—Jonathan Paul.
Georgetown.—Edward Spence, Charles Calhoun.

The above named gentlemen are earnestly requested to send to either of the undersigned, by mail, the name, company regiment, place of burial, and time of death, of each soldier buried in their respective townships or borough. Where all this information cannot be obtained, send us such facts concerning their military history, as you can get. Of course we refer to only those soldiers, who were in the United States service. Friends of the dead defenders of the country, let us invoke your immediate assistance in looking up their graves.

County Institute.—The Teachers' County Institute met at the Court House in this place on Monday Oct. 24th, and continued until Friday evening last. A large number of teachers were present, not only from our own, but from adjoining counties. The Institute was under the direction of Prof. G. M. Fields, the county Superintendent, Prof. Burt, of Pittsburgh, and Mr. Tindall, of New York, were present for part of the session, and contributed no little in making the proceedings interesting. On Thursday evening Mrs. Randall gave an elocutionary entertainment to a well filled room. She is a good reader, and her efforts were appreciated by those who heard her. On Friday evening, professor Wickersham, the State Superintendent of Common Schools, delivered a lecture on Education in the Court House, which was highly interesting. As a full report of the proceedings of the Institute will be published in our next paper, we stop off here.

A FEW ERRORS NOTICED.

No. 7.

In my former article I said something in relation to words which are used to limit or qualify the meaning of other words, and I now propose to give some hints by which such words can be clearly and easily distinguished from other parts of speech.

The classes of words which are used to express quality, describe actions, &c., are called adjectives and adverbs; and we read in our school-books on Grammar that adjectives are used to qualify nouns and pronouns; or, as Lowth—a grammarian in England—tells us, "an adjective is a word added to a substantive to express its quality." Other authors give similar definitions; but they are not complete definitions; for, it is clear to every one who knows anything of our language that adjectives not only express quality, but kind and condition also. And when we come to the analysis of sentences we discover that phrases and dependent clauses perform exactly the same functions that the words called "adjectives" and "adverbs" perform. In the phrase "a sour apple," sour expresses a quality; in the phrase, "a silk hat," silk simply tells what kind of a hat, without any reference to the quality; as, silk hats may be of good, poor, fine or worthless quality; and, in the phrase, "a thick child," thick does not describe either the kind or quality of child, but only its condition.

In the phrase, "a man of honesty and industry," the word man is qualified by the prepositional phrase "of honesty and industry," just as it is qualified by the adjectives honest and industrious in the phrase "an honest and industrious man." In like manner, "a very wicked man" conveys the same idea that is conveyed by the phrase, "a man of great wickedness," and "an educated man" is "a man of education."

In the sentence, "the man who, by his indomitable energy and splendid accomplishments as a brave and skillful soldier, gained an immortality of fame at Winchester in Sept. 1864, has been appointed commander-in-chief of the army," the subject is qualified by a dependent clause, and the verb, in that clause, is qualified by another clause.—The simple sentence, shorn of all qualifying words, clauses and phrases, is this: "The man has been appointed commander-in-chief;" but, we ask, what man? and we are told, "the man who gained an immortality of fame"; and this answer, we observe, has the function of an adjective. Again, the question arises, he has been appointed commander-in-chief of what? and we are told, "of the army." And now, coming into the class of words called adverbs—those words which describe how things are done—we may ask how he gained his immortality of fame? and we are told that he gained it "by his indomitable energy and his splendid accomplishments as a brave and skillful soldier"; if asked where he gained it, we are told that he gained it "at Winchester"; and, if asked when, the reply is, in Sept. 1864", all three of which phrases perform the function of an adverb. And now we come to the definition of an adverb.

An adverb, all the grammars tell us, is a word used to qualify verbs, adjectives, or other adverbs; but there are so many kinds of adverbs that, to recognise all of them with any degree of certainty or ease, seems impossible to all young persons, and even to many who actually delude themselves so far as to think they are grammarians in the full sense of the term. Adverbs are, indeed, puzzling; and, if we judge from the testimony of the past, we are safe in asserting that they always have been difficult to handle, for we are informed by no less a person than that learned old Roman king, SERVIUS, who flourished 500 B. C., that omnis pars orationis, quando de simit esse quod est, migrat in Adverbium; and this Horne Tooke construed thus: "Every word, when a grammarian knows not what to make of it, he calls an Adverb." This translation, of course, is only a bit of Tooke's humor; yet it is true, at least in a few instances, as Servius says, that "every part of speech, when it ceases to be what it is, changes to an Adverb."

The character of a word can only be determined by its function or usage in a sentence; hence, as Servius says, every part of speech, when it ceases to be what it is, undergoes a change of function and assumes a new character. In the phrase "a pound of gold," gold is a noun; but, in the phrase "a gold ring," gold is an adjective. In the following sentences, the changes which words sometimes undergo is clearly illustrated:

Bring me a light.
It has a light shade.
Light the lamp.
"But they made light of it and went their way."
—Bible.

In the first sentence, light is a noun; in the second, an adjective; in the third a verb; and in the fourth, an adverb.

"He said that the that that you passed, was not the that that that man passed."

In this sentence that occurs six times—twice as a noun, twice as a relative pronoun, once as a conjunction and once as a demonstrative adjective.

But, to return to our subject, can rules be framed by which qualifying terms can be readily and certainly distinguished? I reply in the affirmative, and I think I can frame such rules. They are these:

1. Every word, phrase and clause which will answer the questions, Which one? What kind? What quality? What color? What condition? How many? and any question in relation to magnitude, as—How long? How thick? etc., is, in its function, an adjective.

2. Every word, phrase and clause which will answer the questions, How? When? Where? Why? and, with regard to duration of time, How long? and, with regard to motion toward a place, How far? How high? etc., is, in its function, an adverb.

In colloquial usage, adverbs are much abused. It is no rare thing to hear adjectives qualify adjectives, as "remarkable cold," "wonderful large," etc., instead of remarkably cold, wonderfully large. I know of no two adjectives that are so outrageously treated as steady and opposite. Steady is not only mispronounced by the illiterate, but in many instances by those who should know that there is no such adjective as "steady." And what shall I say of that most barbarous of all barbarisms—that most vulgar of all vulgarisms—"furnenst," for opposite! And again, we must, in the presence of many persons, have our ears shocked and our sense of propriety outraged by such vulgarisms as "beyandz" and "beyant" for beyond; and "yander" for yonder. E Pluribus Unum.
"Our Liberty we prize, and our rights we will maintain."—Iowa.

Three remain of the fifty-six signers, whose names and patriotism we are now about to notice and close the sketches. They hailed from Georgia, a state so named in honor of George the second of England.

1st. Button Gwinnet was born in England in 1732. He received a good education, after which he became a merchant, in which business he remained for several years, when he embarked for America and first fixed his residence in South Carolina; but, afterwards, removed to Georgia where he purchased a tract of land. In 1776 he was elected a delegate to the Continental Congress from Georgia, and was there in session to affix his name to the Declaration of Independence. He was elevated to the highest station in gift of the State; but in the collisions of party his feelings were wounded. He aspired to the office of Brigadier General, but was defeated. The result was an alienation between Colonel McIntosh, his rival and himself. And, forgetful of the station he was placed in, he challenged his adversary:—they met, and Gwinnet fell, May 27, 1777, in the forty-fifth year of his age. He was a noble, high-spirited man; yet by a false sense of honor, he gave way to the practice of duelling, which was too common in the portion of country where he resided, and so sacrificed a life which promised to do honor to his adopted country.

2d. Lyman Hall was born in Connecticut in 1731. He entered Yale College at the age of sixteen, and after graduating with the usual honors, commenced the study of medicine. Mr. Hall removed to South Carolina in 1772; but the same year took up his permanent residence in Georgia, and entered at once upon a successful practice. He was among the first in his colony who boldy denounced the home government, and for a long time stood almost alone in arousing the people to Revolutionary resistance. A large portion of the people manifested opposition at first to adopting these extreme measures. The people of the parish of St. John resolved to act independently, and in 1775 elected Dr. Hall a delegate to the general Congress. Although not an accredited delegate of a colony, he took his seat, with the unanimous vote of Congress, and soon ranked among its prominent members. He continued most of the time in Congress until 1783, when he was elected Govenor of his State. His death occurred the year following, in the sixtieth year of his age at his residence in Burke county.

3d. George Walton was born in Frederick county, Virginia, 1740. He was brought up a mechanic but, possessing a fine mind, found means to improve it. At fourteen he was apprenticed to a carpenter, his master opposed him in his desires after knowledge, and only by the light of pine-torches in the midnight hour, could he find a time for study. But this time was well improved, and after finishing his legal studies, was admitted to his profession, in the colony of Georgia, and in which he was eminently successful. Here he secured the confidence of his confederates, and was placed on several important committees and signed the Declaration. He was appointed Colonel of militia and was present at the surrender of Savannah to the British. During its defence he was wounded and made prisoner, and detained until 1779. In October 1779 he was elected Govenor, and in 1780 elected to Congress. After a few months stay he returned to Georgia, was again elected its Govenor, and in 1798 Senator to Congress. He was a Judge of the Superior Courts for fifteen years until, the time of his death 2d of February 1803 in his sixty-fourth year.

The aggregate ages of these fifty-six patriotic men amounts to three thousand five hundred and sixty

SELECT MISCELLANY.

SIGNED WITH MY BLOOD.

BY CAPTAIN HOWARD.

In the spring of 1850 I entered the detective force. I will not here give the whys and wherefores for so doing, but leave the reader to conjecture. It is said that when a man becomes a detective—a man hunter—he is desperate. The saying was applicable to my step. But why did you do it, Captain? asks an inquisitive reader. Perhaps, my dear friend, I had been jilted; perhaps a great commercial crash had left me penniless, or doubtless I found the years of bachelorhood gathering about me, and I, with "no visible means of support." The last conjecture is most probable; don't you think so?

But to the story—to the leaf I pluck from the tree of a detective's life.

I was seated one morning on the steps of the W——— House, awaiting for breakfast, when little Dick, the errand boy of headquarters, ran up and whispered in my ear:

"Captain, the chief wants you."

"Is his business urgent, Dick?" I asked, for I did not relish a walk with an empty stomach.

"No; you can eat your breakfast," and the boy bounded away.

After partaking of my morning's meal consisting of coffee, ham and eggs—a dish I relish—I sauntered away toward headquarters. As I entered Eighth street I saw several groups of men talking excitedly, and I knew that something important had taken place, with which my summons to headquarters was connected, I quickened my steps, and not long afterwards stepped into the office.

"Take a chair, Howard," said Matsell.

I seated myself, and he continued;

"A murder was committed last night. Some person or persons assassinated Mr. Royston, the banker, in his chamber."

"They did!" I exclaimed.

"Yes; you will have to work out the case, as the rest of the force are engaged. A reward of five thousand dollars is offered for the arrest of the murderer."

"I will do what I can to bring him to justice," I answered, "and will proceed at once to the scene of the midnight murder."

I went direct to the banker's mansion, and was shown to the room where the body still lay as it had been found. An examination of it and the chamber gave me a clue by which I hoped to secure the villains, for I knew that two persons were concerned in the tragedy. I went to work, with success in the distance, and in a month, felt the rogues almost with my grasp. But on the threshold of accomplishment I was thwarted.

One night, as I was standing by a lamppost—my head bowed upon my breast, meditatingly, a hand touched my arm and looking up, I confronted a richly clad female. Her face was covered by a veil, through which I caught a gleam of her eyes—fiery eyes—like the flashes of lightning from an inky sky.

"Ah! I have found you at last, have I?" she said.

"It seems so," I repeated. "What do you want with me?"

"Do you ever listen' to death-bed confessions?"

"Very often."

"I have a friend who is nearing the portals of that undiscovered country. He has a secret—one that he has carried in his heart these many years—which he wishes to confide to you."

"Why to me?" I asked. "There are ministers who will hear it, and sooth his dying moments with comfortable thoughts."

"He will confess to you alone, as his confession is about a case you worked in once. Will you go?"

I hesitated. The woman might be sincere, or she might be a decoy to lead me into a net, set by thieves and murderers, who wished to rid the world of me. But that case I had worked on, I started. Perhaps he knew about the great Martin mystery, upon which I was engaged for two years.

Without answering the woman's question, I asked one:

"Where is your friend?"

"I will not tell you, sir. If you will go, say as much, as he will die with the secret untold."

"What is his name, then?"

"Ah! you doubt my sincerity. I will go."

And she stepped away.

I reflected a moment, and resolved to accompany her, let good or evil be the result, I sprung forward and touched her arm.

"I will accompany you."

"Thanks," she said, turning. "Allow me to bandage your eyes."

And she produced a kerchief.

I protested against such a proceeding but finding her inexorable, I suffered myself to be blindfolded.

On, we went. I tried to enter into a conversation with my mysterious guide, but was unsuccessful. I gained no information save that the man to whom I was being conducted lay dying in a basement. After walking some distance, a mile or two, I should judge, we stopped. My guide knocked at a door, which was opened. Down a flight of steps I was led till another door was reached, which opened. I was pushed forward, the woman saying:

"He is here."

I heard the door shut, the key turned, and steps ascend the stairs. I tore the bandage from my eyes, and looked around. I was in a small room, evidently a cellar, in a poor portion of the city, for the apartment was very small. A lamp burned upon a rude table, upon which lay writing materials. But what attracted my attention most was two masked men, a few feet from me, directing two pistols at my breast. I had been deceived and drawn into a murderer's net.

Quick as thought my hand moved to my revolver, but the ominous click, click, checked me.

"Two can play at that game, Tom Howard," said one of the masks.

"You know me, then?"

"Of course we do, and take pleasure of informing you that your life is in our hands."

"And you intend to deprive me of it?" I ventured to say.

"Well—no—yes. If you sign a certain instrument of writing, you live—if not you die."

"I would like to know in whose presence I stand," said I, stepping forward.

"The murderers of John Royston, the banker," replied the masks.

I recognized one of the voices instantly as belonging to a tall dark-faced fellow, who for some months I had followed like a sleuth hound.

"Ha!" I cried, "it is you my covey. Two days more, and your career of crime would have ended."

"You must catch a man, before you hang him, my dear Howard," was the taunting rejoinder.

"We'll see, sir."

"A truce to this badinage," said one of the men, stepping up to the table, while his companion kept a pistol at my breast, "you must sign this paper if you value your life."

I went to the table, and read the following oath, written in an uneven but legible chirography:

"I, Thomas Howard, a detective, do solemnly swear that I will desist from the pursuit of the murderers of John Royston, banker, for the period of one year, so help me God;"

"Signed with my own blood, this, the 12th day of July, 185—."

I turned to the men after reading, and said:

"What does 'signed with my own blood' mean?"

"Exactly what is said," was the one-elucidating reply."

"Then I refuse to sign."

"You are rash, Tom Howard. The bond is good for one year only. Sign it, and live."

There was something so significant in this last sentence, that I changed my resolution.

"I will sign," I said; "but at the end of the year mentioned in my bond, I will hunt you down, and bring you before outraged justice."

"No boasting, sir; make ready to have some blood spilled;" and one of the assassins laid aside his pistol, and produced a lancet.

I bared my arm to the elbow; but he laughed saying:

"Not your arm, Howard; the blood must come nearest the heart. Bare your bosom."

"Is this another Shylock affair?"

"No sir; we want no flesh—merely blood."

I bared my breast; he made an incision directly over my heart; caught the blood in a spoon, dipped a pen into it, and placed it in my hand. I bent forward and signed the bond. The bandage was then replaced over my eyes, the woman who had brought me, then appeared, and conducted me through several streets, when she suddenly left me. I removed the kerchief, went to headquarters, and announced my intention of sticking to my oath. The Royston case was put into the hands of Dick Clay, while I was detailed to work up a burglary.

Time passed, when one morning I was summoned to the city prison, to hear the confession of a woman who attempted suicide. She was dying, but a faint smile appeared on her hectic cheeks as I entered the cell.

"Mr. Howard," she said I have laid violent hands upon my life, and am dying. I sent for you. Let me see, this is the———."

"Eleventh of July." I answered, seeing her hesitate.

"One year ago come to-morrow night, you signed a bond to desist from pursuing the murderers of John Royston."

"I did."

"The bond is null and void to-morrow night, and you are at liberty to pursue them,"

"Which I intend doing."

"Listen, then, to my confession. Last January, two men entered John Royston's house and murdered him. I assisted them. We escaped detection until you got on our tracks. We intended to leave the city, but you remember how you foiled us. You were weaving your web around us, and there was left but one course by which we might escape. I decoyed you into that cellar, where you gave a bond not to follow us.

"The men left the city, but I remained, as I did not fear Dick Clay. It was I who sent him on a false trail, from whence he returned discomfitted and I was arrested, but succeeded in clearing myself. The real murders are in Paris at this time."

"How will I find them in the great city? Can you give me no clue?"

"They purchased a flower store with the money taken from Royston's safe. There is a letter under my pillow. I received it from them a month ago. Its contents may throw some light upon their exact whereabouts. The names are—bend nearer—are—

"What?" I cried.

"Ran—Ban—. I am gone!" and she fell back dead.

I got the letter she had spoken of, but it helped me not at all. It was dated at Paris, and had two Y's in the place of a signature.

I went to Paris in the next vessel, and arriving there, searched two weeks, but in vain. I was on the point of giving up, when I encountered an American—a jeweler—who had resided in Paris some years. I inquired of him if he knew of any flower store kept by Americans. Yes he knew of but one, Rue Beppo. He believed it was owned by "Ranlin & Bro." That was the place I was hunting for, the names that the dying woman tried to pronounce; began thus: "Ran"—the remainder was "lin."

But the Rue Beppo was the last place on earth that I would have looked for a flower store.

When I reached my hotel I set to work and removed the heavy beard and moustache, which adorned my face, and repaired to the Rue Beppo. I entered the flower store, and a clerk awaited my pleasure. I desired to see the proprietors. They appeared and I introduced myself as Geo. Hall, of Calvestion. They did not recognize me.

I could hardly restrain myself when in the persons of the firm I recognized the murderers of the banker.

"Gentlemen," said I, after talking a while with them, "were you ever in New York?"

"Oh, yes," said one, "we lived there several years."

"Did you know one Annie Graham residing there?"

Their lips grew ashy, and they rose to their feet.

"What of her?"

"She is dead."

"Well?"

"And before she died she confessed."

They stepped forward shoutiug:

"Who are you!"

"Tom Howard, at your service."

And at the same time I drew a brace of revolvers, and leveled them at their heads. "Gentleman the bond having expired, I have done what I said I would do that night. I have tracked you, and now you are my prisoners. Come with me."

Weak as lambs, they followed, speaking not a word. At the door we were met by a squad of French police, whom I stationed near as reinforcements in case of necessity. The villains were locked up till a vessel sailed for the United States and I had the pleasure of being their companion during the voyage.

When the ship reached New York I delivered my prisoners over to the authorities, who tried them, found them guilty, and they expiated their crimes on the scaffold. The people were surprised when they learned of the detection of the Royston murderers after such a lapse of time.—They did not know that I was under bond for one year.

Gen. Lee and Mrs. Fairfax.

The New York Commercial Advertiser says: The great Confederate leader, just dead, was as remarkable for his social as for his military qualities. His handsome person, aristocratic bearing and polished manner made him especially the idol of the fair sex wherever he went. The severity that marked his deportment in camp and battle totally deserted him when the responsibilities which they imposed were withdrawn, and in private life he was one of the most genial and humorous of men. We recall an anecdote of this fun-loving element of his character. The incident occurred a few years before the war. Among the most frequent visitors at the mansion on Arlington Heights were the Fairfaxes of Alexandria. Mrs. Fairfax was one of the General's particular favorites, and the attentions of her society were not least among other inducements which tempted him so often from Arlington to Alexandria. One cold December morning, while riding through the streets of that most delectable settlement, he espied Mrs. F. approaching from the direction in which he was going. A few moments later he had dismounted and engaged her in conversation. The lady had armed herself against the inclemency of the weather by carrying a white muff, with which she relieved the tendency of her nose to assume a too brilliant pink, by pressing it every few moments to that frost-beleaguered organ. In doing this many of the hairs came off on her veil, a fact which the General noticed, but did not refer to it until he saw a friend turning an adjacent corner and coming that way who was somewhat notorious as a quiz. Speaking hurriedly, in an altered tone of voice, and with an affected air of trepidation, he turned to Mrs. Fairfax and said: "My dear Madam, here comes Judge——! Do permit me to remove those hairs from your veil—they're the same color as my beard!"

—On Thursday last a severe hurricane visited Key West, and six vessels were wrecked in the harbor.

THE GREAT

Baltimore Piano Manufactory.

WILLIAM KNABE & CO.,

Manufacturers of

GRAND, SQUARE AND UPRIGHT

PIANO FORTES,

BALTIMORE, MD.

These Instruments have been before the public for nearly Thirty years, and upon their excellence alone attained an unparalleled pre-eminence which pronounces them unequalled. Their combines great power, sweetness and fine singing quality, as well as great purity of intonation, and sweetness throughout the entire scale. Their is elastic, and entirely free from the stiffness found in so many Pianos.

In Workmanship

they are unequalled, using none but the very best SEASONED MATERIAL, the large capital employed in our business enabling us to keep an immense stock of lumber, &c., on hand.

☞ All our SQUARE PIANOS have our New Improved Over Strung Scale and Grand Concert Action.

☞ We would call special attention to our late improvements in GRAND PIANOS and SQUARE GRANDS; PATENTED Aug. 2, 1868, which bring the Piano nearer perfection than has yet been attained.

Every Piano Fully Warranted for Five Years.

☞ We have made arrangements for the sale of Waterhouse & Green's Patent Organ Attachment to PARLOR ORGANS and MELODEONS, which we offer Wholesale and Retail, at Lowest Factory Prices. WILLIAM KNABE & CO.,
